

THE LOUISVILLE DAILY JOURNAL.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1866

NUMBER 247.

FASHIONS FOR 1866

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY
PRENTICE, HENDERSON, & OSBORNE,
JOURNALISTS FOR BUSINESS,
Green street, between Third and Fourth.

J. W. BRADLEY'S DUPLEX ELLIPTIC SKIRTS!

THEY will not bind or break like the old-fashioned skirt.

WESTS, BRADLEY, & CAREY,

note owners of the Patent and exclusive Man-

Manufacturers and Makers of Fashions, in all their branches.

STANDARD SKIRT OF THE FASHIONABLE WORLD.

A who's who of all the leading fashions in the world.

Made by all tailors who sell class-silk goods.

COTTON.

OPINION OF THE PRESS.

ELECTION OF GENERAL ROUSEAU.—Although quite limited interest was manifested in the general Congressional election Saturday the good and chivalrous Rousseau is returned to his seat in the Federal House of Representatives by a very hand some vote of his admiring constituency. It is a personal vindication on which Gen. Rousseau will be proud, and an indorsement of principle that will exalt the lively and enduring gratitude of every Kentuckian worthy of the name. The complete return of the city will foot up from twelve to fifteen hundred votes. As far as we have learned the vote in the several Wards was as follows:

Boulevard.
Third Ward.	1,102
Fourth Ward.	1,042
Fifth Ward.	1,042
Sixth Ward.	1,042
Seventh Ward.	1,042
Eighth Ward.	1,042
Ninth Ward.	1,042

In the second precinct of the Fifth Ward Captain J. A. José received one vote, and in the Eighth Ward Mr. Ayers one. In the second precinct of the Sixth Ward, one vote was cast for Colonel Wm. P. Thomas, late of the Bureau.

SCHOOL DIRECTOR.—The new Third Ward school building, the architect of which we have described in the Journal was dedicated to the high educational purpose it is intended to serve, on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The President of the School Board, Superintendent of Schools, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, members of the School Board, Mayor of the city, members of the General Council, City Council, teachers of public and private schools, and many distinguished ladies and gentlemen of the city participated in the exercises. Professor L. East Peterkin, Simon, Plato, and others favored the company with some original operas, music, vocal and instrumental pieces were made by Oliver Lewis, Esq. G. L. Dashiell, Esq. President of the School Board, and His Honor Mayor James S. Lithgow. The school will open to-day under the management of W. H. Baileys, Esq., who has engaged a competent board of teachers.

The further progress of education in our city, as indicated by the number of new schools in the First and Third Wards, and in Germantown, should excite the pride of every citizen of Louisville.

CLIMATE.—A MISTY-A-SAFARI.—Yesterday morning, the Coroner, Dick Moore, was called upon to hold an inquest at Jackson street, between Breckinridge and Kentucky streets. The body of a white male infant was discovered in the vicinity of the grand Encampment at Tindall's farm, near Sardis.

STORY OF THE INFANT.—During the stormy night of Friday last, a party of Indians, who had been hunting in the woods, came to the house of an old colored woman. No clue was obtained as to who the natural mother was, but when the child was committed to their care, it was believed that the crime is on the increase in our city. It is hard to imagine a woman falling so low as to deliberately violate the holy instinct of maternity while destroying the life of a child. Nor hardly is there need through justifiable means, if that is the law she should disregard. For during her walking hours and in her dreams will the wail of a tiny voice and the form of that helpless infant come to that mother with the power of an avenger. Still life itself becomes burdensome. So truly will crime become its own reward, though human justice shrubs. We append the inquest.

INQUEST NO. II.—Sunday, Sept. 16.—At the house of Mrs. S. Lee, w.c., on Jackson street, between Second and Kentucky streets, on the body of a white male infant, Verdict—Cause to be inquired of the coroner.

DR. MOORE, L. C. U.

OUR CITY.—A few days ago a negro named C. C. Clayton, who some weeks ago was also reported as having been killed in Louisville, was again reported as having been found dead in the same place. He was a negro, and had many pitiable and pecuniary favors from the railroads men of this city, turn out to have been an impostor. Col. Albert Pusk received a dispatch from L. J. Fleming, the General Superintendent of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, saying that Clayton had no connection whatever with road. It is hoped that the rascal may be apprehended.

TRANSIENTS.—Mr. CHARLES THAYER.—It is conveyed by all who attended the Louisvillian last week that Mr. Thayer attracted the more critical and select audience ever seen within that temple of the muse. When we could not find a man of like brilliant success, Mr. Thayer will appear again in Shakespear's greatest character of Hamlet, and we expect it to be a masterly performance. The interesting play of Daphne is announced for repetition on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. This will be intensely gratifying to those who were unable to witness the representation last week.

A STUPID RUMOR.—On Saturday, Officers Murch and Tiller, of the city police, arrested one Timothy Haggerty, the perpetrator of numerous thefts of merchandise, etc., in stores of the People's and U. S. Mail houses, which have been discovered in the last few weeks. He was found at the house of Henry Snyder, on Water street, between Third and Fourth. The officers were satisfied that Snyder was accessory to the thefts, and with him and Haggerty were committed to jail. A large quantity of the missing goods was recovered from its depots in Snyder's house.

ONE OF THE cleverest artifices of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad is Capt. E. J. Gifford, conductor of Paine and Harrison's elegant sleeping cars. The Captain's ability to see on Friday and Saturday nights will ever be pleasantly remembered. We regret that he continues leaving the road—the company and the traveling public will give him a well deserved compliment.

WE ARE IN RECEIPT.—A beautiful little song, written in two-four, entitled "Kings at the Gate," by F. B. Stenhouse, also first lesson on piano, by F. C. Stenhouse, also the "German," by James W. Long, published by D. P. Daniels, of this city. He will accept our thanks "Kings at the Gate" might answer for a serenade song.

DISMISSED.—Susan McKinley and Mary McCullum, arrested on the charge of attempting to burn the house occupied by them, on the corner of West and Main streets, had a hearing in the police court Saturday, and were honorably acquitted. They established excellent characters.

GATE BALL.—Dr. A. R. Jones, whose arrest and imprisonment for fraudulently obtaining money from the proprietors of the United States and Willard hotels has been fully noticed, was on Saturday released on $500 bail, to answer an indictment at the November term of the Criminal Court.

THE NATIONAL—The National base ball club of Washington City, D. C., has challenged the Louisville Club to a match game for the championship of the South, the contest to take place in Washington during the present season.

NEW CORNERS.—The first base of new corners for sale in this market has been erected by Porter, Fairfax and Co., from M. Bell & Co., Atlanta, Ga., and will be sold on "Change after the snapshots are over."

HIGH MASS.—High Mass was celebrated at St. Francis Xavier's Industrial School yesterday morning. A large crowd was in attendance.

LAW VS. PHILOSOPHY, OPTICS.—At 2 o'clock the police court Saturday morning was on the City's 11th and Wood ward, obstructing the view on Center street by a projecting sign. This caused had several confusions to awe the members of the Common Council or a petition sent in by the defendant. The case had a hearing. The proof of a novel fact there was a sign some fourteen feet high and four or five feet long by two and a half wide, an oval sign, surmounting an iron post near the curb-stone in Center between Green and Jefferson streets. The defense admitted that such a sign was there, and that it was the sign of the defendant, but denied that it was an obstruction. The defense introduced a scientific gentleman who proceeded to demonstrate that, as the sign was fourteen feet high the altitude was so much greater than the common line of sight was no obstruction, as it could be seen over every corner slowly moving in funeral processions to be seen. An omnious silence reigned over the city business seemed at an ebb, and the streets were in a manner unpeopled save by those following mournfully on to convey their kindred or friends' untimely grave. The faces of some were blanched with fear and the demeanor of all was melancholy and in accordance with the feelings of the people. At that juncture Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams, striking him four times once through the breast to the heart, and once through the heart to the head. The son of Marlow, who was described to us as quite a boy, and may have been scarcely ten years old, was now standing by Williams' head. From they lost their Ashes, he, in his grief, stepped forward, and taking Williams' hand, said, "Poor Williams, you have done me a wrong." And then, drawing his knife, sprang forward, and cut off Williams' head, and then stabbed Williams four times. At that moment Polk Marlow, a copies of the old man, rushed in with his wife, and in time to the defense, shouting him out and stablized Williams,

